Story

--- "Yumesuke's Dream-Senryo Souvenir"

The cherry blossoms along the Tokaido road are in full bloom, where a young man in travel attire is leisurely making his way to Edo. His name is Yumesuke, and there is a reason why he is heading to Edo; his father, who is a village headman in Soshu Odawara, told Yumesuke to set out on a trip with a thousand gold coins to experience and learn pleasures that would help him grow as a "man of the world". In a post-station town which is not far from Edo, Yumesuke is approached by a woman in travel attire. Saying that she is afraid of being followed by a bad man, the woman asks Yumesuke to let her stay with him for the night. Thinking that it is one of pleasures he should experience, Yumesuke agrees to share a room with her at the inn. The woman, in fact, is an infamous pickpocket called Oranda Ogin; she targets the rustic Yumesuke who seems to have plenty of money. The following day, Yumesuke finds out that his money has been stolen. But instead of getting angry at her, he gives her one hundred gold coins, saying that it is even a small price to pay for the interesting theatrical show. Touched by his simple and bottomless kindness, Ogin instantly falls for Yumesuke. After arriving in Edo, Yumesuke starts a peculiar cohabitation with Ogin, who unilaterally barges into his accommodation and acts like his wife to take care of him.

One day, Yumesuke visits Iseya, a courier service in Edo, where his money to spend on pleasure has been kept in. The Iseya's young master Sotaro, who is a well-known playboy, takes Yumesuke to Gomeiro Teahouse in Fukagawa district in order to teach him how a "man of the world" plays at a teahouse where guests are entertained by geisha. There, however, Yumesuke becomes involved in trouble...

Yumesuke, who is an exceptional good-natured man in Japan, solves one trouble after another brought about by Edo locals with colorful personalities, by using his money and kindness. What will the people of Edo earn from their encounters with Yumesuke who is the embodiment of virtue, and what will be the outcome of his pleasure trip?
